YOGYAKARTA STATE UNIVERSITY

INTERNATIONAL SEMINAR

Background

ood governance as expressed through factors like reliability, predictability and accountability is increasingly seen as a key factor in ensuring national prosperity. However, many aspects of good governance are still poorly understood and may indeed vary across countries.

Recent economic and social development have increased attention given to the roles that good government and corporate governance play in achieving social and economic development.

Public management reforms have been a key factor in improving capacities of countries to address issues such as budget deficits and external pressures on competitiveness.

There is also a growing recognition that the current world financial crisis stems from weaknesses in governance, and that durable solutions to this crisis need to address these governance problems.

System of government governance affects the nation's performance in executing its core functions and through this, its performance in meeting major economic and social goals. Government creates the conditions for well-functioning market, operation of private sector, strength of civil society, and welfare of communities and individuals.

System of corporate governance will help protecting organization from poor decisions and exposure to dangerous risks. Good governance can transform overall organizational performance. Poor governance, on the other hand, could have a major negative impact on the going concern of any organizations. Many organizations have ignored the importance of good governance or never really understood what good practice is and have paid the price for their failure.

To support good governance, human resource management plays significant role as they perform the key function of recruiting people, training them, performance appraisal, motivating employees and retaining the employees.

Objectives

To address those issues, the seminar aims to achieve the following objectives:

- 1. To discuss current issue of governance in public and private sector
- 2. To analyze the impact of good governance on economic growth
- 3. To review the importance of human resource management in supporting good governance and economic growth
